I quickly jumped into the Armored Car and drove to the local garrison. Bueno, yo tengo una pregunta que proponerte.

La última nota encontrada en internet se me hizo muy famosa y yo les pregunté si alguno de ustedes tenían algún manuscrito/archivos aquí en el SLaverna (o otro sitio).

También les pregunto lo mismo, pero a quien? Mucho gusto por contestar.

1-Unrar. 2-Extract the file in the data folder of your Game 3-Reboot the console 4-Connect to the server 5-Launch the ELDEN RING game 6-Enjoy! if you don't mind me asking, how big a fudge pie are you making? I'm making a 2ltr fudge pie with a 23cm diameter. (Actually, my actual measurement is just over 23cm, but I'm cooking one of my biggest fudge pies, I'm only going on intuition here and I'd hate to make a mistake) You are still doing a full crust and I'm not sure if that is what you are doing. There are two ways of doing full crust pies. 1. A full top/bottom crust (9 inches diameter) with the filling in the middle. 2. A bottom crust (9 inches diameter) with a top crust (1.5x9 inches) Some people don't think it's worth the extra effort, but the top crust does affect the crustyness of the bottom crust (when cooked) much more than it affects the flavour of the filling. The only good way of explaining it is that if you stack and bake two identical 9 inch bottom pie crusts side by side, one of them with the top crust and the other without, you can see the difference in the top crust to the bottom crust after baking. If I remember correctly, the top crust tends to crack less when baked (if the filling is hot) so it's easier to eat your pie. I think most problems with pies is people underbake the bottom crusts. Beware of gaps in the top crust between the pie and the edges of the plate. This can be a big problem when it is being served, the pie will fall out of the plate, or the contents will spill. If you don't want to bake your top and bottom pie crusts separately, I would recommend 2 flat bottomed muffins. This will allow you to put a top crust on top of the muffin before baking. Another thing I have recently learned is that the filling has to reach 165 degrees Celsius before the bottom crust starts to go brown. You want to bake the bottom crust before the filling so that the filling doesn't start to set up before you put the top crust on. These are two things I was not
