Your Bayanno Hospital Management System 3.1 Nulled Script Not Working. Could you please help? A: It sounds like you are using a Remote Server, in which case a set of files should be uploaded to your server directory. When you upload the files, some of the files will show up with a.zip or.tar extension, others will be straight.php files. These ones need to be uploaded to the root directory of your web server. Other things you might want to do are checking the permissions of your directories, making sure the directory you're uploading files to is writeable, and verifying that the server has access to the directory where the files are stored. If you don't have access to a remote server, you might be able to upload the files to a server you have access to, but you would have to access your script through a web browser. Traditionally, broadcast television has been a model of predictability. A viewer could turn on the television, pick a channel from a list, and expect to see a certain kind of program on that channel. The channels were ordered at the top of the list, with the most popular channels appearing toward the top of the list. The channels were organized by type of program, with sports, news, and other programs having fixed and predictable schedules. In the early days of the television industry, the manufacturers of television sets also developed channels that provided programming (e.g., television shows, infomercials, and other kinds of programs) not covered in the lists of television channels. These additional channels were called “free channels” because the additional programming was considered to be available to anyone with access to a television set. Over time, various regulatory agencies, such as the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), began making requirements for broadcast television that mandated that certain programming (e.g., educational programming and public service programming) be provided on these free channels. So, for example, the FCC mandated that public broadcasting be broadcast on free channels
