Citrate synthase (CS) is the first enzyme in the citric acid cycle and a key enzyme of the C3 carbon metabolism. CO2 assimilation is accompanied by an increase in the concentration of the citric acid cycle intermediate oxaloacetate. Thus, the amount of citrate synthase reflects the level of the C3 carbon metabolism in leaf tissues. In this study, a unique polyclonal antiserum against the pea carboxylase kinase catalytic domain was raised and was used for immunoblotting. The antiserum recognizes the carboxylase kinase only in the presence of the antigens. The polyclonal antiserum was used to quantify the amount of citrate synthase in balsam fir, white spruce and Scots pine leaves. Two bands for CS were observed: the slower one was found to be of similar size in all trees. The faster band was distinguished into two isozymes in balsam fir and one isozyme in white spruce and Scots pine. The pattern of band formation was identical in the presence of oxaloacetate, malate or succinate as substrate. In the presence of citrate and oxaloacetate, the quantity of the CS isozyme was distinctly higher in the trees growing in the boreal zone than in trees growing in the temperate zone.
